The finance committee for sports day, Friday, August 8th, Messrs. H. W. Chambers and J. A. Findlay, report that they met with good success on their tour for funds and appreciate the manner in which they were re-

Help! Help! This was the story that three of the fishing party composed of Messrs. A. G. Studer, H. S. Patterson, L. J. Kalbfleisch and Alec. Robertson, heard one evening when they were out amongst the bear, wild cats and cougars last week. Of course they were all scared out of their seven senses, but it was only L. J. Kalbfleisch who thought he had a 50 lb. trout (more or less) on his line but which proved to be a bough of a tree which looked like a sea serpent. Louie did not sleep much that night. The followers of Isaac Walton caught 80 fine big trout and were about 48 miles west of town.

Mrs. J. Wesley of East Didsbury was taken to the Holy Cross Hospital, Calgary, on Monday night's train. Mrs. Wesley has not been in her right mind for some time, and her health has been bad, resulting as above.

H. C. FORREST, MANAGER

DIDSBURY, ALTA., JULY 11th, 1913
Those who make the Golden West Hotel, Didsbury, Alta., their home, please take notice that on and after the first day of August, the meals will cost thirty-five cents (35c) instead of 25c. The reason why, it is impossible to serve the meal we do at less. As those who patronize this house are aware, we have been serving an excellent meal and prompt service for the money, but from a financial point of view we are at a loss, therefore to continue to serve our many patrons as in the past we must raise the price to 35c per meal.

Thanking those who have patronized this house under its new management and assuring one and all that we will continue to serve, as in the past, the best that money can buy, including service.

Yours Truly,

GOLDEN WEST HOTEL,

BRUNER BLOCK, CALGARY

Haste Quite Unnecessary

The evening was damp and cold and foggy, and the Rev. Sandy Macgregor, while walking absent-mindedly along the street, fell heavily into a deep hole which had just been made by order of the local sanitary authorities.

For a long while the Rev. Sandy struggled to escape. Then despairingly he began to shout for help. A passing laborer heard his cries, and looking down into the hole, asked who was there.

The minister informed him, but in return received only meagre comfort.

Well, well, said the laborer, ye needna kick up sic a noise. You'll no' be needed afore the Sabbath, and this is only Wednesday night!

PRESIDENT SUSPENDER

NONE SO EASY

Of Course the Boy Won

Friday afternoon, Mr. Grigson was busy, and being particularly anxious to get away from the office, greatly resented the arrival of visitors.

Still, business is business and word had come up that there was a gentleman downstairs waiting to see him on an important matter. So Mr. Grigson swallowed his resentment and bade the messenger bring up the gentleman.

The gentleman entered—a cheeky-looking little whippet-snapper, four feet nothing in his socks.

Mr. Grigson glanced at him angrily.

What the dickens do you mean by saying you want to see me on important business, he thundered. Are you the boy who was here a week or so ago looking for a job?

Yes, sir.

Then what the—began Mr. Grigson, now purple in the face. But the youth interrupted him.

You said then, sir, he remarked calmly, that you wanted an older boy. That's why I've come back again now.

A Guaranteed Article

Two travellers in the fireproof safe line were soliciting orders from a merchant, who decided to bestow his order upon the one whose advocacy proved the most convincing.

Well, remarked Number One, a cat was put in one of our safes, and a fire raged all round the safe for 24 hours and the animal came out alive.

A cat was put in one of our safes, asserted Number Two. Then the safe stood in a fire for 48 hours and the animal was taken out dead!

Ah! snorted Number One triumphantly.

Yes, added Number Two. The cat was frozen to death.

Number Two got the order.

Relief from Asthma.—Who can describe the complete relief from suffering which follows the use of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy? Who can express the feeling of joy that comes when its soft and gentle influence relieves the tightened, choking air tubes? It has made asthmatic affliction a thing of the past for thousands. It never fails. Good druggists everywhere have sold it for years.

Tommy Knew

The teacher was endeavoring to illustrate to her pupils the association of different species of life with common substances.

For instance, she explained, you will always find plants where there is soil, birds where there are trees, and so on. Now can anyone tell me what we associate with fish?

Suddenly, with the velocity of an aeroplane, a hand shot up from the back row. It was the property of Tommy Jones. Please, miss, I know, piped that worthy.

Well, was the teacher's query.

Chips, was the unexpected reply.

Might Make a Mistake

I have often stood in a slaughter house, observed the fleshy man from Chicago, while the butchers were killing hogs on all sides of me.

Oh, exclaimed the tender-hearted but tactless New Haven girl, weren't you dreadfully afraid?

Wanted to be Realistic

She could not see his face as he knelt and asked her to be his. She was glad of that, for she did not wish to know how much suffering her refusal caused him.

She told him as gently as she could that their lives could not be linked together; that, although she admired him and esteemed him, she felt that it would be risking his future as well as her own to consent to a union where she was sure no affinity existed. It was a touching speech, and she threw so much heart into it that she did not observe that he was taking notes in shorthand. When she had concluded he arose and put his notebook in his pocket. Extending his hand, he remarked, genially:

I'm ever and ever so much obliged to you.

Si-r-r-r!

You said it so nicely, and I'm under a thousand obligations. I'm writing a novel, and I have a scene in which a girl refuses to marry a man. I was anxious to avoid the stereotyped style of depicting such incidents and make it realistic. You're the seventh girl I have proposed to, and every one of the others accepted me. If you had said: Yes, I think I'd have been completely discouraged.

There ought to be only one head to any family, shouted the orator.

That's true replied a married-looking man in the audience.

You agree with me? shouted the speaker.

I do, replied the married-looking man; I've just paid for hats for nine daughters.

CHILDHOOD COLIC COMPLETELY CURED

No other medicine will so quickly cure colic as will Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and drive out every trace of this trouble. Concerning them Mrs. Wm. A. Smith, Rockhaven, Sask., writes: "I like Baby's Own Tablets and always keep them in the house. Whenever my baby has colic I give her a couple of Tablets and she is soon well again. I know of no other medicine for little ones to equal them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Tired of Waiting

Puddleton and Mudmore were met to decide supremacy at cricket, and the newly-elected captain of the Puddletonians, to signalize the honor done to him, was defraying the cost of a hot luncheon. This repast was to be taken at the close of the first innings and things looked promising for an early meal until the last two Mudmore batsmen took it into their heads to offer a sturdy resistance to the home bowling. This fact seemed particularly disquieting to a stout man in a white apron, who stood at the entrance to the pavilion signalling to the home umpire.

How's that? bellowed the bowler, at length, as the ball struck the batsman on the head.

Hout, came the reply.

Hout! cried the batsman, scornfully. Well I'm done.

Yes, snapped the umpire, and so's the mutton, guv'nor. I ain't goin' to eat cinders for nobody.

Til for Tat

The other morning a warden entered a cell and found the prisoner had not finished his allowance of bread, and was trying to hide it. The warden immediately threw it out of the window, remarking that it would do for the birds to pick, and gave the prisoner his supply of oakum to do. He returned some time later to collect the prisoner's work, but found him asleep, and upon remonstrating with him, and inquiring where his work was, received the following reply:

Well, guv'nor, yer see you threw my breakfast out of the window, and I threw the oakum. If the birds can pick my bread they can pick my oakum, too!

A Tiffin, Ohio, man once discovered in ambush a sad-faced little girl with a fistful of mud. She was standing in a sheltered corner of a grocery store and was from time to time peering around down the street.

Who are you waiting for, little girl, asked the man.

Henrietta.

What's Henrietta done? asked the man with a significant glance at the mud in the child's hand.

Nothin'. Don't you know she's she's queen of the May?

Young man, we need brains in our business.

I know you do. That is why I'm looking for a job here.

To those About to Wed

For the benefit of prospective bridegrooms, a vicar has proposed several don'ts. Whatever you do, he says, don't spoil everything on the wedding day by telling your wife what ripping tarts your mother makes. Swallow the bride's pie, tell her it's a dream of delight, and then take a pill on the sly.

When you marry a woman don't imagine that you know her. You'd be a fool if you did. She knows you right enough, or she wouldn't marry you. Judge a person by intellect rather than talk. I'd back Disraeli any day against Jack Johnson. Because a woman is well dressed, it does not follow that she is clever; some stylishly-dressed women are fools. Don't judge her by her lips or nose, or the quality of her dimples, but by intelligence and goodness.

The vicar told an amusing story of a good-looking lass who was asked by a chap sitting next to her in a railway carriage whether she believed every word in the Bible. She said she did.

Surely, the man exclaimed, you don't believe that Jonah was swallowed by a whale?

I do, she answered. When I get to heaven I'll ask him about it.

But suppose he's not in heaven? said the man.

Then you ask him, the girl replied.

Obliging Him

Arthur Roberts, the famous comedian, like most celebrities of the stage, was from time to time pestered by would-be actors who had an idea that they were born geniuses. One young man was particularly persistent in his attempts to see Mr. Roberts, and wrote to him frequently asking for advice as to how he could get on the stage.

Mr. Roberts politely advised him to give up the idea, but the young man would not do so, and began haunting the stage-door of the theatre, until at last the comedian could stand it no longer. The aspirant was invited in one evening, and Mr. Roberts met him on the stage after the fall of the curtain.

You are the gentleman who wants to know how to get on the stage? he said. Well, isn't it simple? Isn't it easy? You're on it now! No, not a word of thanks! I'm delighted I'm sure! You'll find it just as easy to get off. Good-night. After that he was left in peace.

A Household Medicine.—They that are acquainted with the sterling properties of Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil in the treatment of many ailments would not be without it in the house. It is truly a household medicine and as it is effective in dealing with many ordinary complaints it is cheaper than a doctor. So, keep it at hand, as the call for it may come most unexpectedly.

Served Him Right

At a local cricket match in a village not far from Durham the captain of the home side, in playing a fast ball from the crack bowler of the visiting eleven, received a sharp crack on the knuckles. As the batsman danced round the crosse in obvious pain a small boy in the crowd was heard to exclaim: Serve him right!

You shouldn't talk like that, my lad, observed an old gentleman, reprovingly. The man's hurt, you know.

Yes, An know, retorted the youngster, an' it'll teach 'im what a rap o'er the knuckles is like.

The batsman was the village school-master.

Little Sarah was watching her mother who was ironing some linen. Is it hard work to iron, mamma? she asked.

Pretty hard some-times, the mother replied.

The little girl was thoughtful. A moment, then she exclaimed:

Oh, mamma, wouldn't it be fine if you had married a Chinese laundry-man?

Must Have a Grumble

I have a complaint to make. It was a guest at the seaside hotel who spoke.

What is it? asked the polite proprietor.

My room, said the angry guest, is comfortable, and the bed is soft.

But, my dear sir—

The bathing is actually good, and the London newspapers reach here in three hours.

Why, I—

The table is good, and the waiters do not expect to be tipped.

But sir, I don't see—

In fact, the place is delightful, and your bill last week didn't bear a single thing that I had not had. I can't stand it!

But what do you mean? I have purposely arranged everything for the comfort of my guests, and thought I had done all in my power.

That's the whole difficulty. Everything's so good that I can't believe it's true, and I lie awake all night for something to happen and my dream to end. I'm fretting myself ill over it, and if you can't give me something to grumble about pretty soon I'll have to pack up and go home!

When the new girl from the employment agency had duly presented her references and the mistress had read them over, she regarded the girl with a stern eye.

I am not satisfied with these references, she finally said.

I'm not, ayether, mum, said the frank Celt, but they're the best I could get, mum.

Our experience with them and the many reports we have received from those who have used them prove that they are really the most pleasing and satisfactory bowel remedy we know of.

Rosell Orderlies taste like candy. They are soothing and easy in action. They don't cause griping, nausea, purging or excessive looseness, as do the usual physics or laxatives. Rosell Orderlies seem to act as a tonic-strengthening upon the nerves and muscles of the bowels. They promptly

Edmonton's New Stock Pavilion Completed

For this year's Exhibition at Edmonton the large Stock Pavilion will be completed, which will to a large extent make the Show independent of the weather; the judging can take place inside the arena, which is 85 x 220 feet; the building itself is 195 x 315 feet, has seating capacity for 5000 people, and stabling for 200 animals. Many other improvements have been made in addition to the completion of this building. The manufacturers' Building has been floored with cement a tunnel has been made under the race track to permit horses to go to and from the stables to the show ring in front of the grand stand without interfering with or being held up by the races. The accommodation for Poultry has been doubled, and an entirely new building fitted up for the Dairy Products and Domestic Manufactures. Excursion rates will be in force on all railroads.

If you are a housewife you cannot reasonably hope to be healthy or beautiful by washing dishes, sweeping and doing housework all day, and crawling into bed dead tired at night. You must get out into the open air and sunlight. If you do this every day and keep your stomach and bowels in good order by taking Chamberlain's Tablets when needed, you should become both healthy and beautiful. For sale by all dealers.

The High School

The high school is a large brick building where young men and women are taught everything except spelling and the location of the Panama canal. It is a costly edifice, and is usually built with the aid of a double-barreled tax which causes the perspiration to stand out on the brow of the body politic.

High schools are established for the purpose of introducing ambitious students to a collection of languages which are never used in ordinary conversation. By the time a student is able to talk fluently on his fingers in the original Greek, Hebrew and Sanskrit, he is fitted to do everything except keep books in his father's store or adjust a corn plaster so that it won't skip over nine hills at one leap.

The most effective hold which the high school has nowadays is higher mathematics, which is drilled into the sweet girl graduate as thoroughly as possible. This is an excellent thing, for when the girl graduate gets married she will have fully as much use for geometry and trigonometry as a blind man for a reading glass. There are thousands of high school graduates who can parse a right angle triangle with their eyes shut, but who don't know whether Aaron Burr was the second husband of Pocahontas or a trademark for a new brand of sleeveless underwear.

The high school is presided over by fifteen or twenty teachers who take the plastic mind of youth and fill it full of decimal fractions, German vowels, Shakespearean sonnets and other gray matter, which come in very handy when the graduate begins to learn the grocery business. The high school also teaches a style of angular penmanship which the addressee has to stand on his head to read.

High schools are a great blessing, but they would be more popular if they spent less time on botany and biology and more on single entry bookkeeping.—By Howard L. Rann.

Marriage Safe- guards

Rev. J. E. Hughson, pastor of McDougall Methodist church Edmonton, said in an interview today that some changes should be made in the laws of Alberta, so as to prevent the union of undesirable and ineligible persons. At present, he added, marriage licenses are too easily obtained. The remedy he suggests is that all persons who desire to marry should be compelled to produce to the minister, in addition to the license, one or two affidavits from responsible persons living in the vicinity of their last abode, affirming they are legally entitled to wed. This would prevent a large number of runaway marriages, he said, and would also be the means of checking marriage of persons under age. The affidavit, he thinks should also contain a statement as to the characters of the contracting parties for the minister's guidance.

Dysentery is always serious and often a dangerous disease, but it can be cured. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has cured it even when malignant and epidemic. For sale by all dealers.

Biggest Percentage Canadians

Seventy-eight per cent. of the people living in Canada when the last census was taken were born in this country. People born in the United Kingdom or British possessions outside of Canada made up 11.2 per cent. of our total population in the census year, while those of foreign birth constituted 1.2 per cent. of the whole. Thus nearly eight out of every ten people in the Dominion were of Canadian birth, less than twelve in a hundred were of alien birth.—Red Deer Advocate.

A King Murderer

The Story of the Two Unfortunate Princes

By MARGARET BARR

The romance-tragedy of English history is the career of the Duke of Gloucester, afterward King Richard III. Within it are many stories, and Richard is both the hero and the villain of every one of them.

When King Edward IV., Richard's brother, died, Edward's oldest son, who became king, was a little boy. Richard, whose courage was equalled only by his ambition and who possibly at the time designed to make himself king, at once dashed at the head of a troop of his adherents to where young Edward was and captured him.

The next important scene in the tragedy is the little king riding on horseback from the city of London to Westminster abbey, his Uncle Richard riding beside him, regarding his nephew-sovereign with every pretense of reverence and affection. It is probable that Richard was even then plotting to supplant the child; that this apparent devotion was to win the confidence of the people with a view to furthering his opportunity, but whether the arch fiend then contemplated murdering his brother's son has not been proved.

The little king's mother as soon as she saw reason to fear her brother-in-law took refuge with her other children in the sanctuary of Westminster, for in those days no person, king or commoner, might drag one from the sanctuary without incurring the anathemas of the church. But the boy remained with his uncle, who also secured possession of his younger brother, the Duke of Clarence.

The Tower of London, which for more than two centuries has been only a fortress and is now mostly an object of curiosity for tourists, was then also a palace and a prison. Richard fixed the residence of his nephews there, assuming to reign in the minor king's name. England at the time needed a strong governing hand. Richard succeeded in convincing certain persons of influence that he had better be king. Others he threatened; others he put out of his way by beheading them. Many of the commoners were with him.

When all was ripe he seized the scepter. From the first the little princes were virtually prisoners in the Tower, though they were treated with all the reverence due a king and a prince of the blood. But they never came out from the gloomy walls. The people never saw them. Young as they were, they were old enough to realize that they were in the hands of one in whose way they stood and their lives were in danger.

Richard had a son of his own whom he idolized and whom he desired should succeed him on the throne of England. Probably this feature of the case turned his mind to the murder of the two princes, his nephews, for so long as they lived their title to the crown would stand before that of Richard's son. At any rate, there came a time when Richard determined to murder his nephews and looked about for some one to do the deed.

He sent an order to the lieutenant of the Tower to have the princes put to death. The officer refused to obey it. In this he braved the king, then an all powerful sovereign, but to force a man to commit the murder would have at once made the murder known, and this did not suit Richard's purpose. When he received word that the lieutenant would not do his bidding he lamented aloud that he had no one on whom he could rely in his extremity. A page overheard what he said and, knowing his meaning, told him that he knew a man who would serve him as he wished to be served. The man was called, accepted the commission and left for the Tower.

For four centuries a pitying world has been wondering as to the death scene of the poor little king and his brother. All that is known is that to keep their cries from being heard they were smothered in their bedclothes. When all was over their bodies were taken down to the foot of the stairs below the room in which the deed was done and there buried. Later, when the murder became known, it was given out that they had been buried in Westminster abbey. But this story was disproved many years later, in the reign of Charles II., when on making changes in the Tower the skeletons of two children were found at the foot of the staircase, as recorded by one of the murderers at the time of the murder.

The taking off of the princes, being known only to a few, was kept for a long while. But there were whisperings, and in time it became known to the queen mother and her daughters that their dear ones had been murdered by their uncle. In addition to their horror at the crime and their bereavement, they dreaded lest the king murderer, defying the sacredness of their refuge, would drag them from the sanctuary and kill them also. As time passed and nothing was heard by the people of the princes, who were supposed to be living in the royal apartments of the Tower, they began to wonder. Then the dreadful news spread from mouth to mouth, and a great horror fell upon all England.

At last the murderer received his first punishment. His beloved son, for whom he had committed the crime, sickened and died. Richard had no other son, and at his death, after all, the crown would rest on another head than one of his own family.

Meanwhile the queen mother of the murdered king remained in the sanctuary. Her oldest daughter, Elizabeth, was now heir apparent to the throne. The Duke of Buckingham, a powerful noble, conceived the idea of marrying this princess to a prince of the blood, the Earl of Richmond. The princess being of the house of York and the earl of the house of Lancaster—two families that had kept England in a protracted warfare by their disputes for the crown—the marriage would unite the two families and end the wars. Richmond was in France, but he crossed the channel and landed in England at the head of a French force. The attempt, however, was a failure. Richard with his accustomed energy attacked him before the French and English columns were prepared to fight and defeated and routed them. The Duke of Buckingham was captured by Richard and immediately beheaded.

A second landing was made by Richmond, and Richard again sprang forth to his work.

On the king's way to the battle which was to decide his fate he slept in an inn called the Blue Boar. Richard took with him his own bed and had it set up for him to sleep in the night before the battle. He had on his conscience the crime of murder, his nobles were beginning to desert him, and there was no one to whom he might turn for comfort.

In a house not far away lived a boy under the care of a man who, though he gave him every comfort and educated him, told him that he was not his father. The boy's name was Richard Plantagenet, and this is all he knew of his parentage.

The night before the battle of Bosworth a trooper rode up to the house where the boy, Plantagenet, lived and told him to come with him. They went to the inn where the king was lodged, and the boy stood in the royal presence. Richard embraced him and told him that he was his father, though the lad had not been born in wedlock. "Tomorrow," said the king, "I fight for my crown. If I win I will acknowledge you, and you shall hereafter live with me as my son."

Quite likely Richard contemplated in case he won the fight—to force this natural son upon the English people as his successor. Be this as it may, young Plantagenet the next day took position on a hill overlooking the battlefield on which was to be decided whether he was to live the life of a royal personage or that of an outcast.

The king awoke in the morning showing by his appearance that he was under a terrific dread. His face was livid, and he complained of having had frightful dreams. The crime of murder being on his conscience, knowing that he could not rely upon some of the nobles who had brought their retainers to serve him, it is likely that he feared defeat and punishment.

And what saw young Richard Plantagenet from the hilltop? When the battle was well on, one of the nobles who formed a part of Richard's army swung his troops to the other side. This was the signal for the defection of others, and presently the greater part of both armies were opposing the king.

Then the boy saw his father make a marvelous dash to turn the tide in his favor. The king saw the Earl of Richmond and, putting spurs to his horse, followed by only a handful of retainers, made straight for his opponent. Coming near the earl, he struck down single handed those who defended him. But the struggle was too unequal. A soldier bore down the king and dispatched him.

History gives no definite account of the subsequent life of the boy who from the hilltop saw the dashing of his hopes. But there is an account of a man who was a bricklayer and who at noon-time, when his fellow workmen were resting, would be found to be reading. On one occasion a person, curious to know what he read, looked at the book. He found it to be written in Latin.

This man was Richard Plantagenet, who from a hill near Bosworth field saw his father slain and his sudden hope of living the life of a prince go out forever. This man afterward was for many years known to be the natural son of Richard III., king of England. On a tombstone over a grave near by where he lived is his name, Richard Plantagenet.

The king being dead, the bedstead he had slept in the night before his death remained in the Blue Boar inn. One day many years after these events happened the landlady while cleaning the room heard something drop on the floor and roll away. Picking it up, she saw that it was a gold coin bearing a date just previous to Richard's death. The bed was examined and found to have a false bottom, which was full of money. It had been so fitted by the king to carry treasure.

The victorious Earl of Richmond went from Bosworth field to London, where he was received by the people as their sovereign. He married the Princess Elizabeth, thus uniting the families of York and Lancaster and ending the celebrated wars of the roses.

For four centuries the fate of the little King Edward V. and his brother has stirred the sympathy of all peoples. Artists have chosen the children for themes for pictures, and Shakespeare made the deeds of King Richard the subject of one of his principal tragedies. It was the last act in the real tragedy, the wars of the roses, in which multitudes perished while kings fought for a crown. But when the other historic events shall have passed into oblivion the murder of the royal children will continue to excite the sympathy of the world.

Tattooed Royalty.

Quite a number of members of European royal families bear tattooed designs. The Grand Duke Alexis of Russia, for instance, is most elaborately tattooed; likewise his cousin, the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. The queen of Greece and the king of Sweden are also tattooed. On his arm Prince George of Greece has a wonderful representation of a flying dragon in many colors. One of King George's arms bore a similar design, and Prince Francis of Teck has a curious picture of a frog leaping for a small beetle tattooed on his right forearm.

When You Are Tired Mentally.

Are you weary? Breathe more; eat less.

Active exercise will not rest you from mental work.

"When you are tired with mental work," says a well known physician, "do not think you must take active exercise. That will make you more weary. All you need is rest and more air in your lungs. Sit down quietly and comfortably and breathe deeply twenty-five times. Rest a moment and repeat. This air forced into the body removes the waste material which makes you weary."

"Don't eat all you want. Food not needed for support of the system is so much extra work for the body and requires more air to dispose of it."

"This regimen will diminish your grocery bill and save your shoe leather."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Quite a Difference.

When the Baroness Burdett-Coutts was Miss Coutts, the great heiress, it was rumored that she was to wed the Duke of Wellington. A friend asked the duke if the rumor was true, and the duke answered irritably:

"I said Miss Angela Coutts deserved to be a duchess. I never said that I would make her one."

This observation of the duke's was repeated to the heiress. She finished on hearing it, smiled a little bitterly and remarked:

"The duke should have said 'could,' not 'would.'"

His Only Subject.

Mlle. van Vorst in a recent book tells a story of a dinner at Chicago given by the ambitious wife of a millionaire tanner. The lady noticed, to her annoyance, that her husband did not speak a word to their smart guests, and when she got an opportunity she whispered angrily, "Why don't you talk?"

"What's the good?" replied the tanner contemptuously. "There ain't one of 'em as knows a thing about leather."

An Odd Business.

"Insurance people are queer."

"How so?"

"First they convince you that you may die within a week to get you to apply for a policy; then they must convince themselves that you'll live for years and years before they'll issue it."—Boston Transcript.

He Could Run.

An anxious traveler on a street car, with watch in hand, seeing he had only a few minutes in which to catch a train, said to the conductor, "Can't you make any faster time than this?"

"Yes," answered the conductor, "I can, but I have to stay with the car."—Everybody's.

An Awful Threat.

Kitty—Why are you so fearfully glum, dear? Marie—Jack made an awful threat last night when I rejected him. Kitty—What, to shoot himself? Marie—Oh, worse than that. He said he'd never propose to me again.—New York Sun.

"Now, Thomas," asked the teacher of a small pupil, "can you tell me what a junction is?"

"Sure I can. A junction is a place where a railroad gets a divorce from itself."

RATHER GREWSOME.

In fact, the English Hunter Was Sure It Was Quite So.

In the Nairobi club I met a gentleman with one arm gone at the shoulder. He told his story in a slightly bored and drawling voice, picking his words very carefully and evidently most occupied with neither understating nor overstating the case. It seems he had been out and had killed some sort of a buck. While his men were occupied with this he strolled on alone to see what he could find. He found a rhinoceros that charged viciously and into which he emptied his gun.

"When I came to," he said, "it was just coming on dusk and the lions were beginning to grunt. My arm was completely crushed, and I was badly bruised and knocked about. As near as I could remember, I was fully ten miles from camp. A circle of carrion birds stood all about me not more than ten feet away, and a great many others were flapping over me and fighting in the air. These last were so close that I could feel the wind from their wings. It was rather gruesome." He paused and thought a moment, as though weighing his words. "In fact," he added, with an air of final conviction, "it was quite gruesome."—Stewart Edward White in American Magazine.

TURKISH STOICISM.

A Very Poor Shot and a Perfectly Good Natural Target.

An incident that occurred in the experience of an English officer is told by the London Spectator to illustrate the calmness and indifference to death and bodily danger characteristic of the Turkish soldier.

The officer, accompanied by a guard of Turkish soldiers, went to the edge of a cliff overlooking the sea to shoot at a seal that he saw disporting itself in the water below.

He fired a good many times, and the last shot had gone very near the bubbling mark when one of the soldiers came to him and politely asked, "Do you not think, sir, that you have fired often enough at Sergeant Yussuf?"

The supposed seal was indeed the sergeant. Presently the sergeant came ashore, put on his clothes and came up the cliff smilingly. The officer apologized handsomely and blamed himself freely. But Yussuf, like his companions, did not think there was much to be concerned about. After all, the mark had been very small. It was natural to fire at it, it was unlikely that the deer would hit it, and he (Yussuf) had not minded it at all.

When You Are Weary.

Are you weary? Breathe more, eat less. Active exercise will not rest you from mental work.

"When you are tired with mental work," says a well known physician, "do not think you must take active exercise. That will make you more weary. All you need is rest and more air in your lungs. Sit down quietly and comfortably and breathe deeply twenty-five times. Rest a moment and repeat."

"Don't eat all you want."

Age of Westminster Hall.

Westminster hall is quite five centuries old, possibly more, for Richard II., who is credited with its building, was really little more than a repur of "Rufus" roaring hall," as Pope described it. The hall, so intimately interwoven with the history of England, has, according to Fuller, the distinction of possessing "cobwebless beams." They were, so a popular tradition affirmed, of Irish oak, in which it was impossible for spiders to live and spin their webs. Cunningham tells us that the roof "is of chestnut and very fine, the finest of its kind in this country." It was the meshes of the law, if not spiders' webs, one might have looked for here of old, for during long centuries England's courts of law were held in Westminster hall.—London Chronicle.

Bigger the Steal, Smaller the Crime.

The Manx law of old times had many oddities, but none, surely, quantier than to make the greater the crime the less, because of the impossibility, within the narrow limits of the law of Man, that the bigger thief should be successful.

"If a man steal a horse or an ox," so ran the law, "it is no felony, for the offender cannot hide them, but if he steal a capon or a pig he shall be hanged."

A Contractor.

"What's your husband's business?"

"Contractor."

"What line?"

"Deba."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Milady's Mirror

New Wrinkles About Wrinkles.

It is a great mistake to suppose that all wrinkles indicate old age. Some wrinkles and lines are indications of temperament and character and result from a muscular contraction of the cheek or brow. These lines become permanently engraved in the face as the underlying tissue shrinks from the steady contraction and consequent lack of circulation.

Wrinkles are often caused by ill health, mental strain and nervousness, and generally these wrinkles can be induced to leave by careful treatment, and by building up the health and nervous system.

Whatever tends to promote the general health, to increase the deposit of fat in the skin tissues of the face, will help to obliterate these telltale lines and restore firmness and smoothness.

Very often the skin of the face has become extremely dry, and lines form themselves very quickly and for no apparent reason.

While it is absolutely necessary to keep the face perfectly clean, some skins are so delicate and tender that the use of a bland soap is harmful, and such skins need an entirely different treatment from the stronger, coarser skins. It is also necessary to give the skin a chance to recuperate from the drying and parching effect of the steam heated air of modern houses. Skin that is parched and inelastic will wrinkle much sooner than soft, pliable skin. Use plenty of good skin food; don't skimp it; it really does not pay; then wipe it off with a soft towel or piece of cheesecloth.

How to Massage.

Massage the face with a good skin food for twenty minutes at night after the face has been washed with tepid water and the soap paste. Massage, besides stimulating the skin by increasing the circulation, smooths the surface. Think of the skin as a piece of wrinkled soft paper. To make the paper smooth so that it can be used again one pats and smooths out the creases. The same treatment should be applied to the face, the main difference being that the flesh requires a firmer stroke than would be given to a more perishable material.

The following is an excellent skin food for this purpose:

White wax, one ounce; spermaceti, one ounce; lanolin, two ounces; coconut oil, two ounces; sweet almond oil, four ounces; rosewater, two ounces. Melt the first five ingredients in a double boiler, take from the fire and while heating slowly add the rosewater. When quite cold put into jars. This food will not cause a growth of hair on the face.

A good lotion for use in treating premature wrinkles is made from the following formula: Alum, sixty grains; almond milk (thick), one and one-half ounces; rosewater, six ounces. Dissolve the alum in the rosewater; then pour gently into the almond milk, shaking constantly.

How to Remove Dandruff.

An excellent dandruff remover is made up of alcohol, resorcin, cinchon, cantharides and quinine.

A shampooer who takes an interest in her work pays as much attention to the removal of the dandruff as she does to cleansing the hair. The dandruff should be loosened from the scalp by massaging the scalp with the finger tips or by the use of a small brush like a nailbrush. The hair should be parted at intervals so that the scaly substances can be easily reached.

Dandruff on a neglected scalp caked. When this happens there is an irresistible impulse to remove it. Do not do this with the finger nails, as it often causes the blood to flow and may destroy the root of the hair.

Not only does dandruff retard the growth of the hair, but it certainly offends the eye of every one who has any conception of neatness to see the clothing of another covered with these scaly particles. Each of us ought to have sufficient pride about our appearance to endeavor to keep our scalp clean and our clothes immaculate.

Mistress (whose chauffeur has just informed her that Fido has been shut up in the stable because he leaped up at a strange lady in the road)—How odd of him! Do you suppose he thought it was me? Chauffeur—Couldn't say what he thought, my lady.—London Punch.

As He Diagnosed It.

"I fear you do not really love me," said the young doctor.

"Why do you say that?" demanded the girl.

"Your pulse does not seem to me to celebrate any when I hold your hand."—Washington Herald.

Fifty Lives Lost

Binghamton, N.Y., July 22—Fifty persons were killed and as many injured by a fire which swept the four-storey factory building of the Binghamton Clothing Company this afternoon. The victims were mostly women and children.

Westerdale

On Sunday, July 6, the celebration of the ninth Anniversary of the dedication of the Westerdale church, was held in the church. A large and appreciative audience gathered to hear Mr. Powell, the former pastor. It was especially fortunate that Mr. Powell was able to be present on this occasion as he was the organizer of the church nine years ago, and holds a warm place in the hearts of the people of this neighborhood.

The choir, under the able leadership of Mr. Fessenden, rendered some very good music, in their usual capable manner.

Two services were held, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. Between services, a picnic dinner was held out doors, which was enjoyed by everyone.

On the following Tuesday, the Annual picnic was held in the church and was well attended. Everyone seemed to enjoy themselves and reported a splendid time. An excellent dinner was served by the ladies.

One of the best features of the day was a baseball game between Hartmann and Melvin, in which Hartmann won 13 to 12. There were also sports and races of different kinds, which were quite exciting.

The Didsbury band was in attendance and gave some very good selections.

On the whole, everybody reports a splendid time and are looking forward to another picnic next year.

Buy it now. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is almost certain to be needed before the summer is over. Buy it now and be prepared for such an emergency. For sale by all dealers.

Not Friends Now

Two young lady friends met, and after an interchange of the usual salutations, one remarked:

Oh, May, I'm so glad to see you. Indeed, I was just on my way to call. The fact is, I want you, as my oldest friend, to be one of my bridesmaids. Bridesmaids, Daisy! How lovely! exclaimed May. But I didn't know you were engaged.

Well, I know it's sudden, was the answer, but he's awfully much in love, you know; and it's really just too sweet to live. Will you act, May?

Act? Of course I will. I shall be charmed. But, and she took a step as though to move off, do come round the corner and tell me all about it.

Here is Bob Henderson, that laughing idiot. He is grinning just as though he meant to stop and I do not care to be seen talking to him. Bob Henderson! exclaimed Daisy, in an amazed fashion. Why, he's the man I'm going to marry!

True Business Instinct

Topham's was the smartest emporium for miles around. You had to be the last word in go, before a situation was obtained in that establishment. Keen business men filled every post.

One afternoon when trade was in full swing an unfortunate customer fell down the first floor stairs.

Help! he groaned in agony. I do believe I've broken my leg!

A shopwalker immediately flew to his side.

Broken your leg, sir? he inquired sympathetically. And then, in sharp clear tones: Cork legs! Third counter on the right, sir! Forward, Miss Davies!

Schoolmaster—Now I want all the children to look at Tommy's hands and observe how clean they are and see if all of you cannot come to school with cleaner hands. Tommy perhaps will tell us why he keeps them so nice.

Tommy—Yes'm. Ma makes me wash the breakfast dishes every morning.

Surprised the Manager

An increase of salary! exclaimed the pompous manager of a small omnibus company to a clerk who had just made that request. I am afraid, sir, that you are too extravagant!

He toyed with his heavy watch-chain and looked severely at the young man, who returned his stare boldly. It was the set phrase on such occasions and the applicant had heard it all before. He meant to have his rise or go—go somewhere else.

Excuse me, sir, he replied, respectfully, I haven't any chance to be extravagant on what I earn.

Young man, continued the pompous gentleman, I have risen from the ranks. How? By being careful. When I was young I made money by saving 'bus fares.

Ah, that was in the old days, said the young man, with a knowing wink. But with the bell punches and the present system of inspection, you would find you couldn't save sixpence without being collared, however careful you were.

The manager nearly fainted, and the young man had to look for other employment.

Did She Know Anything?

Mildred was visiting her soldier brother at the barracks.

Sis, he said. I wish you had said you were coming. I'm on duty, but a fellow bandsman of mine will show you the sights.

The girl naturally asked many questions of her brother's friend as they went round.

Who is that man? she inquired, pointing to a color-sergeant.

Oh, he once shook hands with the King, said her escort. That's why he wears a crown on his arm.

The gymnastic instructor, with a badge of crossed Indian clubs on his arms, was standing in the yard.

That's the barber, replied the girl's companion in answer to her query. Can't you see he's wearing the scissors?

A number of stars upon the staff of a veteran next aroused the fair visitor's curiosity.

He's the battalion astronomer, gravely explained her cavalier. Guide us home by the stars when we've lost our way on night manoeuvres.

Very interesting, said the girl, with a twinkle in her eyes.

Then noting his bandsman's badge—the model of an ancient stringed instrument—she asked sweetly of her escort: I suppose that design on your arm denotes that you're the regiment lyre?

Always—Serviceable.—Most pills lose their properties with age. Not so with Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. The pill mass is so compounded that their strength and effectiveness is preserved and the pills can be carried anywhere without fear of losing their potency. This is a quality that few pills possess. Some pills lose their power, but not so with Parmelee's. They will maintain their freshness and potency for a long time.

Johnny, who had been forbidden to ask for ice cream cones at the candy store, disobeyed and was kept in the house.

Why isn't Johnny out playing? asked the storekeeper of Johnny's little sister.

Mamma wouldn't let him because he asked for a cone.

You wouldn't ask for a cone, would you? remarked the proprietor.

No, replied the little girl. But I would take one.

A fellow we know—one of those chaps who affect a terrible scorn for the lower classes, but who always pauses to hear a tale of woe from the lowest victim of the present state of society—this fellow stopped on the curb the other day to hear the story of a little pickaninny who was weeping and alone.

What's the trouble? asked our friend gruffly.

Ah, got a new baby brother at our house! wailed the child.

Then why do you cry? Angels bring baby brothers.

Dass what dey done tol' me. But why does de angels pick out all de blackest ones fo' our family?

A New Invention

Jimmie entered the large chemist's with a coin clutched tightly in his hand.

Well, my little man, said the assistant, what can I get for you?

Please, I want a thermometer! piped Jimmie.

Did your mother say what sort of thermometer she wanted? asked the shopman.

Jimmie looked slightly perplexed. Then a bright idea came into his mind.

Why, just give me the very biggest you've got, he replied, cos it's to keep my bed-room warm!

Hubby returned home rather late—well after midnight, to be precise—and as often happens in such cases, wife, though abed, was not asleep. In consequence, breakfast that morning was a gloomy, silent meal.

In vain, hubby strove to clear the air and by ill-timed levity, to dispel the atmosphere of constraint which hung heavily everywhere.

A penny for your thoughts, my love! he ventured presently.

The lady thus addressed stared at him grimly.

For tuppence, she retorted, I'd say exactly what I thought of you!

Hubby made no effort to raise the bidding.

Ma, exclaimed young Teddie, bursting into the house, Mrs. Johnson said she would give me a penny if I told her what you said about her!

I never heard of such a thing! answered his mother indignantly. You are a very good boy not to have told! I wouldn't have her think I even mentioned her. Here's an apple, sonny, for being such a wise little lad!

I should think I am, ma! When she showed me the penny I told her that what you said was something awful and worth sixpence at least.

HEALTH AWAITS GOOD DIGESTION

When the Stomach is Wrong the Whole Body Suffers—How to Keep It Healthy

Indigestion is one of the most distressing maladies afflicting mankind. The stomach is unable to perform the work nature calls upon it to do, and the result is extreme pain after eating, nausea, heartburn, painful fluttering of the heart, sick headache, and often a loathing of food, even though the sufferer is half starved. People with poor digestion are prone to try all sorts of experiments to aid the process of digestion, and there is only one way in which the trouble can be actually cured, and that is through the blood. That is why the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cures even the most obstinate cases of indigestion. They make the rich, red blood that strengthens the stomach and its nerves, thus enabling it to do its work. The process is simple, but the result means a good appetite, and increased health and pleasure in life. Mr. R. Lussier, of Sorrel, Que., offers ample proof of this. He says: "For several years I was a sufferer from indigestion, and the torture I suffered after meals was often almost unendurable. Often I would go without a meal rather than undergo the suffering that followed. Accompanying the trouble I had headaches, dizziness, and often a feeling of nausea. All the time I was taking one medicine after another in the hope of getting relief, but without avail. Finally I read of the case of a similar sufferer cured through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them. I took the Pills steadily for about six weeks with result that I was fully cured, and could eat anything I cared for. I may add that I have not since had any return of the trouble."

If you are suffering from indigestion do not waste time experimenting, but begin to cure yourself today with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which go right to the root of the trouble through the blood. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Straight Tip

The old farmer was making his usual weekly call on Mrs. Wiggins.

P'taters is good this mornin', ma'am, he said, casting an admiring look at the basketful he had brought.

Oh, are they, retorted Mrs. Wiggins That reminds me. I want to have a word with you about them you sold me last week. How is it that them at the bottom o' the basket is so much smaller than them at the top?

Comes about like this, replied old John, a knowing look on his face. P'taters is growing! that fast now, that by the time I get a basketful dig the last ones is about twice the size of the first.

Walking Through the World
I walk beneath mysterious autumn trees,
An autumn twilight hour—
But when I walked in summer field and bower
These too, were mysteries.
Always there is a spirit and a breath
Beyond my spirit's call,
Almost the living trees confess the faith,
And yet I know not what creation saith—
But He who walks here with me knows it all.

There was an hour, O friend of mine, when we,
To each drew very near.
When hand in hand we both grew silent, dear.
Because love could not see;
Always there is a secret yet untold
The barriers do not fall.
Almost I find your life whose hands I hold,
And yet I know not what my hands enfold—
But love Himself is with us, knowing all.

Three-year-old Arthur was taken by his parents to call upon Mrs. L., who had recently come to this country from London. He was greatly interested in everything he saw, particularly in a little English flag.

That is my flag, Arthur, said Mrs. L., in answer to his enquiry, and showing him an American flag, this is your flag.

Has it always been my flag?
He was told that it had always been his flag.

Nothing more was said until time for their departure, when Arthur calmly remarked: I will take my flag.

And he took it—for, some way or other, explanations seemed inadequate.

Actors frequently receive unexpected proof of the realism of their art. Not long ago, on the occasion of the performance of Hamlet by a distinguished English player, there were no more interested, and absorbed spectators than two newbies in the gallery. The boys had been watching the performance with breathless interest. The last act was drawing to a close. The duel almost dragged the lads from their seats.

Before their eyes the queen was poisoned, Laertes killed, the king killed, Hamlet killed. On the final tragedy the curtain started down. The audience was spellbound.

In the gallery there was a clatter and a crash as one of the boys mentioned started for the door.

Come on, Tommy! he shouted back to his companion. Hustle! Dere'll be extras out on dis!

The Plumber

We had a gentle plumber once,
We thought he came to plumb;
But by the time his coat was off
His dinner time had come.

He went at twelve and stayed away
An hour and minutes forty;
He 'wiped a joint,' then wiped his lips
Then trotted off so harty!

The pipe was only half an inch
(In width I mean, not tall),
Yet you could drive a motor through
The hole cut in the wall.

And after having had his fill,
Oh! see him slow returning!
"To one day's work" is on the bill;
He's thus his living earning!

An old darkey, sent to a hospital, on his arrival was placed in a ward, and one of the nurses put a thermometer in his mouth to take his temperature. When the house doctor made his rounds he said: Well, my man, how do you feel?

I feels right tolde, suh.
Have you had anything to eat yet? Yessuh, I had a little.

What did you have?

Nervous Sufferers Often Look Well

While persons subject to disorders of the nerves are frequently thin and weak, such is not always the case by any means.

Many are of ruddy and vigorous strength and so healthy in appearance that they receive little or no sympathy.

In such cases the symptoms indicate trouble in the head and spinal cord. Though strong in a muscular sense, the nerves are affected, and spells of helplessness come over the sufferer. The condition is alarming because the result to be expected is paralysis.

Council Meets

The Council met on Monday night in the Council chambers, Councilors Osmond, Moyle, Sinclair, Chambers, Cooper, Sec. Treas. St. Clair and Solicitor Patterson present; Mayor Atkins and Councillor Durrer absent. On motion by Councillors Chambers and Cooper, Councillor Osmond was appointed chairman for the meeting in the absence of the mayor.

Instructions were given to Councillor Moyle to have the grass mowed on the park lawn, and Mr. Patterson was asked to communicate with the C.P.R. in reference to putting fence around park which they had promised to do.

The Sec. Treas. reported that so far very little of the back taxes had been paid yet, and it looks as though there will be some property for sale for back taxes soon.

Moved by Councillors Moyle and Chambers that any person wishing to borrow from the Town any implements or tools do get the article from the Secretary-Treasurer and sign a paper for the same.

After some discussion on other matters on which no action was taken the Council adjourned.

Didsbury Plays The Game

In the game between Red Deer and Didsbury, at Red Deer, the points were evenly divided, no goals being scored whatever. Red Deer had the advantage, the wind and sun in their favor, and had they not taken these they would have lost. Their defence was good whilst the forwards who were very forceful in mid-field, could not penetrate the strong defence of the locals. It was some time before the teams settled down to good playing, but before half time Didsbury made several good rushes which were saved with difficulty by the Red Deer goal tender. The sun and wind went down in the second half and Red Deer had only their opponents to face. A penalty was given to Red Deer which was saved by Lorne Good. Owens was not five yards off goal and not even the custodian was in his way, but by hard luck he put the ball over, instead of through.

The teams were:

Snell Shield Contest

The tie game of football with Red Deer which the local boys played at Red Deer on Thursday night last and which proved the best game ever played between the two teams and which resulted in a tie with no score will be played on neutral grounds. The deciding game for the Snell shield and the championship of this district will be played at Innisfail on Friday night. Every rooter and supporter of the game in this district should go up with the boys and help them bring back the trophy and championship. They will go up on the five o'clock train. Come out and give them your support.

Junior Baseball

The Didsbury Juniors and the Carstairs Juniors pulled off a very excellent game of baseball on the local diamond on Tuesday afternoon of this week. The Didsbury boys put up a good game but they were altogether out-classed by the Carstairs junior in every way. The score was 6-4 in favor of the juniors, Didsbury failed to score until the last innings which made the game end in excitement, and some of the Carstairs team got a little rattled when things began to go against them which resulted in little wild play.

Some idea of the interest maintained can be gleaned from the fact that neither side scored after the fourth innings until the last. — Carstairs Journal.

AROUND THE TOWN

Alec McNaughton and H. A. Chamberlain, a former Didsbury resident, both qualified at the recent rifle matches in Calgary for the team to represent Alberta at Ottawa. Mr. Chamberlain has been placed on the team and Mr. McNaughton is first on the waiting list, but as a few of those who have been placed on the team are unable to go to Ottawa, Mr.

McNaughton as first on the waiting list qualifies for the position. Mr. McNaughton won five prizes. 2nd in the Paysant Match, 5th in the Rutherford, 8th Grand Aggregate, 6th Alberta, 10th Stokes match.

They say" that a marriage took place on Saturday afternoon last at Oids that was of great interest to a large number of people in town. In fact there were about 100 people ready on Saturday night to go out east and give the happy couple a reception, "but" it began to be whispered that the report was not true and as no information could be got to verify the report of the marriage those who had the affair in hand thought they had better postpone it. However congratulations have been tendered and accepted. Ask Walter and Mrs. R.
